Financial Literacy Symposium at NJCU on December 6

Attendance is free for community nonprofits. Early registrants will receive free signed books.

Please see the following from one of our community partners.
—DCD

On December 6, the NJCU Institute for Financial Literacy is hosting a Symposium designed to provide social service providers, educators, veterans, and librarians with a wealth of resources and information to build financial knowledge and capability. Listen to two bestselling personal finance authors as well as professional financial educators as they present educational sessions for community leaders. Thanks to the generosity of our sponsors, the event is at no cost to community nonprofits. Early registrants will receive free signed books.
